FROM MY ARM CHAIR.

TO THE CHILDREN OF CAMPBELL'S

Who presented to me, on my seventy second birthday February 27, 1879 this chair made from the wood of the Village blacksmith's chestnut tree

And I sing the hour I should call my own
This spider latticed chair or throne
Or by what reason or what right divine,
I can proclaim it mine

Only perhaps, by right divine of song
It may to me belong
Only because the aspearing chestnut tree
Of old was sung by me

Well I remember it in all its prime
When in the summer time,
The robin's epithalamium it heard and cheered with
A cavern of cool shade

There by the blacksmith's forge beside the street,
Its blossoms white and sweet
Filled the bees until it seemed alive
And murmured like a hive

And when the smith of stalwart limb with grave
Closed the doors at night and came away
The chestnut's bursting from the sheath,
Dropped to the ground beneath

And now some fragments of its branch is take
Shaped as a stately chair
Have come to my hearth side and home at last
And whisper of the Past

The Spanish king could not in all his pride
Repel the ocean tide,
But gently in this elder I can rhyme
Roll back the tide of Time

I see again as one may see,
The blossoms and the bees
And I can the children's voices hear at call,
And the brown chestnuts fall

I see the smithy with its fires aglow,
I hear the hammers go the anvil blow,
And the shrill harmony of the grinding axe
The rose white with the heat

And thus our children have you made for me
This day a jubilee
And to my more than three score years and ten
Brought back my youth again

The heart hath its own memory like the mind
And it hath treasured in
Its inmost depths as in a secret shrine
The precious keepsakes into which we wrought
The giver's loving thought

Only your love and your remembrance could Give life to this stern wood,
And make these hard lines lend a new song,
To sing again in song

HENRY W LONGFELLOW

ADONIS, M. D.

"I forbid you my house, do you hear, sir?" screamed Mrs Chickjove, purple with rage and stamping like a cockatoo

Well, but since Mrs Chickjove sent for me—" pleaded Jack Halliday

"Mrs Chickjove be ——" Mrs Chickjove is a silly young woman, with whose feelings you have presumed to trifle,' roared her husband, flourishing his umbrella from the doorstep "Now, sir, be off, I've had enough of this My patience has been driven to extremities"

"As you please," said Jack "My visit was professional but since you refuse to let me see your wife, who is ill and who has summoned me be good enough to give her this box of pills"

The pills spurred Mr Chickjove to exasperation He took the box out of the young doctor's hands, threw it on the ground stamped upon it, pressed his heels on the pills as they rolled about, and concluded this little performance with an exulting yell

"There, sir! so much for your physic! I scout it and you too! Aha!" Saying which, Mr Chickjove opened his house door with a latch key wagged his head fiercely at Dr Halliday from the threshold, and then went in, banging the door with such violence that it made all the window panes rattle The doctor remained outside

He shrugged his shoulders and strode away down the street One might have expected him to exhibit some excitement at the manner in which he had just been treated, but he seemed to have his reasons for preserving a complete equanimity A few minutes pensive walk brought him to a side street of fashionable appearance which he entered, and at the third house rang the bell

"Is Mrs Marrable at home?" asked he of the smart maid who answered his summons

"Yes," said the damsel, but she put a forefinger to her lips and with a mysterious look whispered "Hush, sir As come"

"Who's come?" inquired Halliday, astonished

"Missus brother sir, and, oh my, what a row he's inside Yes sir, please to step in" These last words were spoken aloud and with considerable flurry for the maid had espied a tall lumbering figure darkening the end of the passage The figure stared with all its might at the doctor The doctor accosted it blandly, but a wave of the hand motioned him to step into the parlor, and there he was confronted by a massive, square jawed person, six feet tall, and broad in proportion who, in a deep, bass voice that seemed to come like a miner's from the shaft of a pit, said 'My name is Guckin and I want to know what is the matter with my sister?"

"Really, Mr Guckin there is not much—a slight cold—vapors"

"Then why have you paid her fifty six visits in the course of five weeks?"

"I am highly tell," stammered Halliday, uneasily, "ladies are sometimes anxious about themselves you know The least thing alarms them"

"Enough, I know your game, my man," interrupted Mr Guckin, applying the doctor by the cuff as if he were a prisoner, and staring into his face with an evil glare 'You've heard of Palmer, the Rugeley poisoner, haven't you? and Smethurst, another doctor? and Castaign and Lapommerais, Frenchmen doctors, and poisoners, too? and of that physician lately hanged at Edinburgh for poisoning his wife eh? You'll swing, too, if you don't mind You've laid your plans for marrying my sister, but as she's too old and ugly a frump for you to love, you just think you'll undermine her health first, so that she may die as soon as possible after the marriage, and leave you her money Well, well, just try it Go up stairs and see Mrs Marrable now if you like, but, mind, my eye is on you"

"You can't think that after what you have just said I should consent ever to step into this house again?" ejaculated Jack Halliday, as he disengaged himself, with a burning spot on either cheek

"All right, that means that you are going, doesn't it? or is it only a bit of show off?"

"It means that I am going this minute, and—and I am ashamed of you Mr Guckin, good night"

"Go to the deuce!" said Mr Guckin, and he, too, having shown the young doctor into the street, slammed the door with unnecessary noise

This time Jack Halliday did look a little upset He bit the corners of his whiskers, pulled down his wristbands, and appeared anxious to do battle with somebody, but presently the humorous aspects of the situation broke abruptly upon him, and he laughed His step was elastic and steady—by no means that of a would be poisoner—as he trudged off to pay the last visit on his list before going home to tea

It was seven o'clock of a winter evening, and the lamps of that suburban district of London where our scenes are laid, had been flaring these two hours Dr Halliday made for a row of semi detached villas, and knocking at the door of a house with a pretty garden in front, was admitted without any fuss Here his reception was cordial A fox dog, frisked out barking a welcome and wagging his tail, some children came tomping down the passage to be kissed, and it was under the lead of these little people, the one pulling him by the hand, another holding on to his coat skirts and a third clambering on to his back that the doctor made his entrance into a parlor where a happy family party were mustered The owner of the house was Mr Dawson, a hale, jovial business man husband of a jolly wife, and father of a flock of children

He sat near the fire reading a newspaper, with a couple of rosy brats crowing at his knees, and two more sprawling on the hearthrug Half a dozen boys and girls, between ten and sixteen, were gathered round the table playing lotto and the eldest daughter, a cheerful girl of twenty, was working beside her mother, and casting occasional glances toward a sofa, where lay the beauty of the family, a sweet golden haired girl of eighteen Before the doctor's entry the beauty had been laughing at some joke of her brothers, but on seeing Halliday a gleam lit up her eyes a faint blush overspread her cheeks, and she let her head sink on her pillow in an attitude of delicious languor When the chorus of greetings had subsided, the doctor took a chair beside the sofa, and shook hands with the beauty

"Well how do you feel to day, Miss Emily"

"So weak, doctor," murmured a soft voice, and a pair of blue eyes motioned as they looked into his

"The poor darling has lost her appetite, she could eat nothing at dinner" said Mrs Dawson, a tall, florid and buxom lady

"Oh, mamma! that was because she sent out Jane in hour before grub time to buy her two sausage rolls, three gooseberry puffs and a Bath bun," exclaimed one of the brothers at the table

"Oh those odious boys!" muttered Mrs Dawson but Dr Halliday pretended not to hear He felt Emily's pulse, and the moment his hand touched hers the girl quivered from head to foot "Steel, beef tea, port wine," soliloquized he innocently thinking of his prescription, but if he had looked in his patient's face he would have perceived that she was struggling violently to prevent herself from crying Agitated by spasms as if the shocks of an electric battery were running through her, she forced a handkerchief into her mouth, but at last could contain herself no longer and burst out into a lamentable wail, followed by a torrent of tears

"Ah! nervous debility, outdoor exercise will cure that," remarked the doctor as he rose from his chair with professional composure, but he was surprised to notice that Mr and Mrs Dawson, instead of seemingly alarmed at their daughter's state, were exchanging smiles They beckoned to him to come out of the room and he accompanied them into Mr Dawson's study Then Mr Dawson having closed the door gave Halliday a friendly pat on the waistcoat, and grinning from ear to ear, said

"Now my dear fellow, we quite appreciate your delicacy in not having spoken your sentiments till now, but we think, for our Emily's sake that the time has come when you ought to declare yourself

"Declare what" answered the doctor "I assure you Miss Emily is in no danger A glass of stout at dinner plenty of meat, exercise—a little wine if she likes it

"Come, come you're making fun of us" laughed Mr Dawson, in whose mouth his wife joined "Do you think we have been blind to the purpose of your constant visits so our daughter?"

"Professional visits, Mr Dawson" said Jack Halliday with some wonder

"Well, well we won't discuss that point" continued Emily's lively father 'Look at yourself in the glass man Do you think a fellow of your handsome face and figure can make love to a girl long without setting her heart on fire?"

"Yes, look at yourself in the glass, Dr Halliday," chimed in Mrs Dawson, in a good natured, motherly way "I am sure I am only too glad in my dear Emily that she should find a husband like you Come now and make the child happy by proposing to her I will be bound she does not remain long on the sofa after that"

Jack Halliday murmured a monosyllable which let us hope, was a blessing, but instead of returning to the parlor he darted down the passage, opened the street door, and fled anonymously from the house When he had run twenty paces down the road, he paused, breathless, to exclaim 'Now, I'll be hanged if ever I prescribe for wife, widow, or single dame I've had enough of it"

He had, indeed, had enough of it He was the handsomest doctor within a radius of twenty miles, but the gift of beauty which should have proved a glory and a source of wealth to him, had turned out to be an unmitigated curse Husbands looked him, guardians eyed him askance fathers were continually misinterpreting his attentions toward their offsprings and though he had the most extensive collection of female patients that ever hung out a doctor by day and night to prescribe for vapors, finger aches and ailing pet dogs he enjoyed no patronage whatever from the male section of the community Dr Halliday was not only a well dressed, good looking man whose luxuriant whiskers, and curly black hair were a treat to gaze upon he had the softest voice, the most insinuating polished address, the sweetest of smiles and these characteristics had as potent an effect as his physical charms in making him a ravager of the female heart Certain it is that Mr Chickjove, Mr Guckin, and Mr Dawson had all some grounds for taxing him with having shot darts of Cupid into their respective family circles; and they were not the only persons by many who were entitled to make the same complaint The best of it was, however, that Jack Halliday was absolutely innocent of any purpose to circumvent his fair patients, for he was the disreetest of men, very earnest in his profession, and he would not for a great deal have got himself into any entanglement

He walked home, brooding in considerable disgust, and, as usual, found in his hall a number of maids and pages waiting with pressing notes that summoned him to go out and see divers ladies He dismissed this cohort of messengers pretty roughly, telling them he should go out no more that night. They protested, but he bundled them all out into the street, saying that he wanted his tea, and should have it. He was not fated, however, to enjoy this cheerful meal just yet, for, on walking into his study, he was met by a dainty, tearful little woman who rose from a chair near the fire, and, lifting her veil, sighed 'Oh doctor, I feel so ill I've been waiting for you an hour

"Mrs Chickjove!" exclaimed Halliday "Why, I called at your house, didn't your husband tell you?"

"Oh, yes, the brute! He would let me die, for all he cared, but you must prescribe for me, doctor—dear doctor! Put your hand here on my heart and feel the palpitation See how ill I am"

'Really, I don't think there's anything the matter with you, Mrs. Chickjove," said Halliday, severely. "Anyhow, as I don't understand your case, I advise you to consult my neighbor, Dr. Podgie, whose long experience——"

"Ah, doctor I shall die if you forsake me,' screamed Mrs Chickjove and, flinging herself full length off her seat, fell headforemost by the side of the doctor

Jack, losing his head, caught up the first bottle off his mantle shelf, and forced the contents into the fair sufferer's mouth He found out later—and so did the lady—that he had administered a strong dose of Epsom salts by mistake, but for the present his impulses were curative, for he heard loud moans issuing from the next room, which was his parlor, and running in saw a corpulent, middle aged lady, with a moustache like a grenadier's, gasping on a sofa, with both hands pressed to her broad bosom "Why Mrs Marrable, what brings you here" he cried

"Oh, doctor," croaked the rich widow in a voice which would have done for a drill sergeant's, "I have come to apologize for my brother's atrocious conduct He has made me quite ill The unmanly fellow wants my money—six thousand pounds, doctor, in the three per cents—but he shall never have a penny, my money shall go to those whom I love and who love me Oh, doctor, dear doctor, your prescriptions do me a world of good, I feel that I owe you my life Allow me to weep on your ob"

The cathartic in the doctor's bottle was not all gone he was about to impute what remained of it to soothe the widow's pangs, but at this moment the knocker on the street door was banged with such a riot that he ran out to see what was the matter He opened the door, and in rushed Mr Chickjove, Mr Guckin, and Mr Dawson, all three talking 'My wife is in your house" yelped one 'You've abducted my sister, you scoundrel!" sang out the second 'I'll have no more trifling with my daughter" shouted the third Their fists were clenched and their hair bristled

Jack Halliday, though an even tempered man, lost patience He hurled the entrance to the parlor with his outstretched arms, and keeping his visitors in the hall, said —'Now, one at a time first, you Mr Guckin You called me a scoundrel if you don't instantly beg my pardon I shall request you to take off your coat and we'll have it out here instanter Do you decline?" Mr Guckin did decline to fight and, reddening, muttered an apology 'Very well, off you go, and now, your turn Mr Chickjove"

"Ah you shan't intimidate me, sir," shrieked the Calonic little husband of the lady with palpitations 'If you lay a finger on me, sir I'll have the law on you"

"Yes I know you're a shrew too," said the doctor, calmly, "and that's why I am going to make your conduct Mrs Chickjove will be paramount at the approaching election of a coroner for this district Get me elected and I promise to renounce my private practice I'll never call upon you will not even other ladies except in a friendly way"

"You shan't call on me in a friendly way" howled Mr Chickjove "Yes, sir, I'll get you elected coroner, that's a good idea, for we shall be well rid of you You'll go and live in London Where's my wife? Let me pass sir

Mr Chickjove went in to fetch his wife, and Jack continued to do with Mr Dawson

Mr Dawson,' said he, 'when I've had my tea I'll go and propose to Emily, but conditionally you know, on my getting that coroner ship I don't want to have my wife's jealousy excited"

"You're right there," said Mr Dawson laughing 'A good looking husband with a large female practice would be quite out a tender hearted creature like our Emily" And he left the doctor to his tea

SUCCESS

BY EMMA LAZARUS

Oft have I brooded on fame and pain
The myths of the stupid stumbling throng
Those I ignore to day and only long
To pour my soul forth in one triumphant strain
One clear great shattering triumphant song
That rolls the tones of men in high endeavor
Puts heart in hearing hands deeds that never Else splendor clothing him whose will is strong
First shon behold the daylight eyes of one
Who has possessed and taken over
Rejoice
On mighty diviner shines the oil seeing sun
Sad is the wise heart and cloyed voice
Made eloquent by feeble crowds of spectre wan,

NEGRO EXODUS FROM THE SOUTH.

Scenes in St Louis—Stories of the Fugitives—The Danger to Louisiana Interests

A letter from St Louis to the Chicago Tribune dated March 24, says of the negro exodus from the South to Kansas

"Over two thousand five hundred persons passed through here last week At least two thousand were quartered here for several days in the basements of three large colored churches in the lower part of the city It was in miserably cold rainy weather the first hour loads of six hundred arrived, and the snow and wind were at full force Their arrival was wholly unexpected The Mayor had received word that such a cargo was coming when the boat was but a short distance below the city He and the City Council were much alarmed lest they would become paupers on the city's care, and lest the should bring disease He at once issued and sent out circulars down the river warning all colored people from coming to St Louis without money

'Kansas has sent the most discouraging word that she wants no laborers there who have not money enough to support themselves a year, but the colored people keep coming and push right along The colored people here have stood nobly by their brethren coming out of a condition of poverty and oppression, and have taxed themselves heavily to help them Over one thousand meals a day have been furnished for the past week, the basements of the church have been given up to furnish sleeping accommodations and stopping places The white people have done very little, and do not at all seem to realize the importance of the movement Very few white people even go to see them

"It is reported that strong efforts have been made to induce many of these emigrants to return The Anchor Line of steamers offered free transportation to all who would go back, but from the least to the oldest they all reject the idea with indignation I have asked some of our best colored people here what they thought of the wisdom of this move, and they have invariably replied that they believed all these refugees would better their condition One prominent colored citizen here said to me 'You can know by looking at them how wretched has been their condition in the South Why you can distinguish every colored person who has been in St Louis a year from any of this crowd just by his more comfortable appearance These men are not paupers, they are tillers of the soil, and if they can only get leave to settle on the land in Kansas they will soon be doing well for themselves and well for the State

"It is reported that thousands more are expected What a chance for capitalists who would combine philanthrophy with business, to go out to the fertile plains of Kansas, take land, procure implements, and make money for themselves, and benefit the whole colored race by employing these people and giving them a chance to earn a living. The political effect of the movement it is difficult to estimate. A few more weeks of emigration like that of the last week might materially change the apportionment in Congressmen next year

The St Louis Globe Democrat sent a reporter, accompanied by a notary public, among the colored emigrants to hear them sworn statements as to the cause which had impelled them to forsake the South and seek a new home in the West He wrote given some reports of the interviews The Globe Democrat says

"Many of them stories are most pitiful, and it would be impossible to detail all the outrages which they relate Those given are only a sample of what might be told were the testimony of each man taken While all acknowledge that they have been brought North under false colors, not one seems to regret having cleared the skirts of his rags from the bulldozing districts, and openly declare that they prefer the hardships and even starvation of their present condition to the terrible daily ordeal of doubt and fear under which they lived in the South

'Levi Childs, forty three years old, left the South because he could not make a living and was afraid of being shot

'Frederick Marshall, aged fifty three, said 'I have been living at Natchez, Mississippi, about six years, making cotton I rented about ten acres, for which I paid two bales of four hundred and fifty pounds each and made a tolerable living for a while, until the bust whackers came in and commenced shooting Just before Christmas, 1878, three or four men came to my house about daylight to kill me, and I ran out of the way and stayed out the rest of the night when they went away I didn't know the men They said they would kill me, and had a rope around my neck and said they were going to kill all the smart men and I told them I didn't know anything I knew a man named Page, who was killed at Waterproof, La I was present when they shot him, and I saw him shot They also shot a boy all the house some relation of Page They said Page was one of the smart men When you get to the polls to vote, the white men won't let the colored men vote, and say, if we go to the box to put the ballot in they will shoot us I want to go to some place where I can work without being afraid of my life and heard Kansas was a good place I have a wife I wouldn't go back South again"

"James Brown said he was thirty years old, and came from Madison parish, La Left the South because he had not the privileges of a citizen Mr Bradley, the agent of the place he rented told him in June, 1878 'Brown, if you go to the polls I want you to cast the right ticket' 'I asked him, said Brown, what ticket he wanted me to vote and says he, 'Jim, we are going to carry this thing out our own way, you —— —— niggers has things your own way long enough, and we white folks are going to have it our way or kill out all you —— Republican niggers,' and told me I was one of the leading men I would never go South again"

"George Rogers, aged thirty years, came from Madison parish, La He said 'I left the South because I was afraid of the white folks shooting or killing me I have seen white people going to and at night in Franklin parish in disguise, killing the colored people and robbing them A lady in Franklin, who had a son about eighteen years old, had him murdered I went by the house next morning, and saw the son, he was dead, and shot all to pieces He was a smart boy, and read all the papers, and the white people there won't allow that I want to go to Kansas I could hardly get the living of a dog in the South"

"Curtis Bollard, aged sixty nine, came from the same parish, and is a farmer by occupation Left there because his life was threatened Was accused of inducing people to emigrate to Kansas, and was told that if they were sure he was going they would break his neck Had been visited in February by two men from Richland parish who had been assaulted and cut by bulldozers for coming to Kansas Colored men had been badly treated by the whites No matter how much one raised in the way of crops, he could scarcely secure a living"

The New Orleans Times of March 28 says 'The secession of the city is of course the stampede of the negroes from the cotton region of the State The effects of this exodus are already being felt they are very serious in their nature and must be seriously regarded It is no use for journalists in this city to cry poppycock and gammon Would it were The negroes, like a flock of frightened sheep are rushing of insane frenzy, are making head first to the river and nothing but the most determined efforts will prevent the depopulation of the upper country The causes of this flight have already been described, and when the character of the negro is considered these causes appear sufficiently reasonable The trouble will not be confined to one or two plantations, but threatens to affect the whole State, and the sugar region must suffer when the cotton region is overgrown with cotton weed tiers and weeds

'Not a week ago came an extensive planter to this city to arrange for advances on his coming crop He made satisfactory arrangements, and was on the point of returning home when there arrived a telegram telling him his hands had left In consequence his arrangements had to be cancelled and he is a ruined man Every day the same scene is enacted in this city The cotton planter wishes advances, the commission merchants ask what are his prospects What, indeed, are his prospects under the present condition of things? There seems to be hardly any remedy except, perhaps, were some of the men who have interests at stake to go into the parishes and persuade the negroes into a better frame of mind, even this plan might fail, however as there are now men in these parishes who have the ear of the negroes, and are doing all they can to persuade them to leave, As a last recourse, however, something must be done to persuade the negroes to move into the sugar region, where tranquility reigns and the laborer not only gains but receives his hire

"It is understood that an organization is being made for this purpose, and that everything will be tried to keep the negroes from entirely quitting the State, for it is conceded by the wise that the negroes are the best field workers in existence, and that this State will go to the dogs without them. This is the truth although it does hurt the pride of the average country politician to admit it This great change in the population of this State is going on now, and there is no time to lose if a good result is to be obtained The danger is one of the present moment, and the remedy must be applied at once or not at all As such a moment as this the people of Louisiana must not ask to be called twice to look after their own interests, the case has been clearly and honestly stated—the next thing is action"

There is a large party of women in Illinois who think that, on one issue at least, they should have the privilege of voting This is the temperance issue A petition has been drawn up for presentation to the Legislature, praying for an enactment which shall provide that in all localities in the State the sale of intoxicating drinks, including wine and beer, shall be determined by ballot, and that women, under the same conditions as men, shall be allowed to vote This petition was adopted by the Woman's Temperance Union last October, and since that time Miss Frances L Willard, the President of the Union, has presented its claims with marked success, it is said, in the chief cities and towns of the State As an illustration of the support it has received Miss Lydia Strawn, of Ottawa, Ill, writes to the Tribune, that from La Salle county alone a formidable list of signers will be obtained to the petition, and that in addition to this that county will address letters to each of its representatives in the Legislature asking for their influence and votes, and that these letters will have a still longer list of signers

A country lad and maiden living in a village near Rome loved each other. One day, while he was at a window, he saw the girl pass with a bucket of water on her head. He had a gun in his hand and, pointing it at her, he said, laughingly, "Take care, I'm going to shoot" The girl only laughed, and proceeded on her way, but slowly, on account of the load on her head. A little boy, however, brother to the girl's lover, thinking him in earnest, tried to pull him back by one of his legs. The young fellow, losing his equilibrium, clutched at the window-sill But in doing so he let fall the gun, which went off and struck the girl mid body. She died on the spot.

—Yesterday morning the Whitaker will case was brought to an unexpected termination before Judge Peirce, in the Common Pleas Court, in Philadelphia As soon as the court opened Judge Brewster announced that his client, Mr Sheetz, had decided to offer no testimony, and the jury would therefore, find a verdict in favor of the defendant, which was subsequently done By this action the invalidity of the Dickerson will is established, so far as this proceeding is concerned.

The necessary forms to admit the will to probate were then gone through with in the office of Register of Wills by Messrs. Brewster and Bullitt, after which the will presented was admitted All of the estate goes to the relatives of Mr Whitaker with the exception of small bequests to the Oxford Church, according to the will probated yesterday, while one of the provisions of the Dickerson will was for the creation of a college for girls similar to the Girard College

—The Philadelphia Inquirer thus points out the condition the Democracy left the country in eighteen years ago, and the way Republican administrations have succeeded in reducing the national debt "When the Democracy went out of power eighteen years ago they left the United States Treasury in a depleted and chaotic condition bordering on bankruptcy The leaders who stand in reckless pledged control of that party to day, undertook to destroy the Government, and threw upon the Treasury a burden of $3 000, 000,000 When they left the Treasury could borrow only with exceeding difficulty at interest amounting virtually to 8 per cent and higher The Republican party shouldered this burden, have since discharged a considerable part of it, have made the obligations of the Government as good as gold the world over, and now a Republican Secretary of the Treasury succeeds in refunding the major part of the remaining indebtedness at 4 per cent interest, one half what the Treasury was obliged to pay when the Republicans took the direction of affairs This is well done Apart from allowable pride in the great achievements of the Republican party, we still say this is well done, and no partisan sentiment among right minded people of whatever shade of political opinion ought to prevent them acknowledging that this is well done"

—A bill to protect salmon in the Delaware river has passed the Legislature of New Jersey, and the Pennsylvania Legislature should be urged to pass the same The following is the full text of the bill

"WHEREAS, During the past six years efforts have been made on the part of the Fish Commissioner of the United States and the Commissioner of Fisheries of the States of New Jersey and Pennsylvania, to stock the waters of those States with salmon, and particularly to stock the Delaware river, with a view to making that river a salmon-producing stream, for which purpose considerable sums of money have been expended by the two States above named, and, whereas, the number of salmon taken during the last shad-fishing season furnishes evidence that these efforts will meet with the anticipated success, and the revenues from our river fisheries be greatly increased if sufficient protection is afforded to these fish to allow them to ascend the river at the spawning season, and continue by natural process the work of populating the waters.

SECTION 1 That for the term of three years from the passage of this act it shall not be lawful for any person to take from the Delaware river, or from any of the tributaries of said river within the jurisdiction of this State, any salmon or grilse, with any seine, fike net, gill net, drift-net, pound, weir, rack, or any other appliance or device nor in any manner except with rod, hook and line in the manner usually known as angling, nor shall it be lawful for any person to have in his possession any salmon or grilse taken from the said waters by any of the devices herein prohibited, and any person who shall take from the said waters any salmon or grilse by any of the said prohibited devices, or who shall have in possession any salmon or grilse so taken from the said waters, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of fifty dollars, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, provided, that nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the Commissioners of Fisheries from taking salmon or grilse at any time or in any manner for purposes connected with the performance of their duties' and provided, farther, that the prohibition herein contained shall not be held to apply to the main stream of the Delaware river, until an act shall have been passed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania containing a similar prohibition

SEC. 2. That the penalty imposed by this act for illegally taking salmon or grilse, shall not be imposed upon such shad and herring fishermen as may, in the pursuit of their avocations, inadvertently take salmon or grilse in their nets; provided the fish so taken shall be returned alive to the stream.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D C, April 9 1879

EDITOR GAZETTE —Mr Garfield's grand speech has, of course, been read by all loyal readers of your paper, but Judge Houk, the only Republican member from Tennessee, has supplemented it by one quite as effective and telling upon the country, and certainly as distasteful to the Democrats here Judge Houk is a new member, but his speech fully demonstrates his power as a speaker and that he will make his mark in Congress in all matters where devotion to loyal principles is concerned It was my good fortune in past years to form his acquaintance in East Tennessee and there to learn his sterling worth and talent Full of wit and anecdote, he could entertain his friends by the hour, and on one occasion in particular, when narrating his experiences in the backwoods counties of his judicial district as judge and as practitioner before his successor, whose decisions and rulings were not always of the highest order of legal acumen, he kept us in roars of laughter during the whole evening At that time his personal popularity was such that it was merely a question of his own volition when he should come to Congress, and here he is —Thank God!" Tennessee never put into her many regiments of loyalists a truer, better soldier than Judge Houk He came out of the war with a proud record for courage and fighting qualities that made him feared and respected by the enrebels throughout East Tennessee during the days of Andrew Johnson's presidency days, when a loyalist a bit, who took an advanced political stand on the reconstruction policy of the Republican party, was not worth a pin unless backed by arms and an indisputable courage His speech on Thursday in the House was greeted by applause throughout its delivery whenever he made a telling hit He said that his district needed no military aid, for the Republicans were able to take care of themselves, and such is the fact During the war every able bodied man in that Knoxville district was in the army on one side or the other Kindred was arrayed against kindred Rebels took out gray haired loyalists and hanged them on their own fruit trees Union men had to fight home guerrillas who murdered old and young, and dared to commit any outrage and as a consequence of those trials which forced every man to fight for his home, Judge Houk well says his constituents can take care of themselves But he wants the law which affords others a means of defense to remain unrepealed until every man in the South whether white or black, carpet bagger or scallawag, has a free, untrammeled, fair and equal chance at the ballot box He made a hard hit when he said he never saw a Democrat who did not understand the constitution whether he could read or not and further, that the Republicans would cease shaking the bloody shirt when even the Democrats ceased to bloody it He was not allowed to sit down until he had finished his speech, the only compliment of the kind yet paid any member—one that shows the attractiveness of both his manner and matter More of him and East Tennessee hereafter Though a soldier myself, I never knew how terrible war was until I learned in the years of storm the dire sufferings and horrors endured by East Tennessee loyalists, and it is a proud day for that people when one of their most gallant soldiers can eloquently plead in Congress for right and protection for non combatants

The House has escaped the deluge of bills by adjourning over on Saturday to Tuesday On Monday a two third vote is requisite to bar the introduction of a bill, while on other days of the week it takes the same vote to get one introduced where there is one objection. Conger checks the Democratic flood through the week, and the House takes care of Monday by refusing to sit on that day

In the Senate the harmony is relieved by the introduction of bills, among which is one that General Burnsides fathers, and which is intended to prevent the Government from making arms and ordnance stores, by letting their manufacture out to private contractors I have heretofore spoken of General Burnside's in his doings His persistent clinging to this most pernicious system of an unprincipled ring—it was his first session—indicates that his senility is worse than supposed in the past The bill will bear discussion hereafter, for any scheme looking to the destruction of our present uniformity of arms and ordnance should be fully exposed

Senator Morrill recently made a most interesting speech in opposition to the bill looking to an enlargement of the Capitol for Congressional Library purposes He clearly showed that any alteration of either front of the Capitol for such a purpose would be an act of irreparable vandalism He regards the Capitol as the grandest building in the world of its kind, and urges the erection of a separate structure of large dimensions to hold the annual contributions of 40 000 volumes made to the Government Library D D

—The case of John P Phair, under sentence of death at Windsor, Vt, is a curious one. He was to have been hanged on the 6th of April, 1877, for the murder of Ann E Frieze, but was reprieved by telegram within an hour of the moment fixed for execution Again he was to have been hanged last Friday, and he was reprieved At his trial there was some testimony that he left Rutland, the scene of the murder, several hours before the murder was committed Now, there is a certain Mr Downing, of Boston, who is perfectly sure that he saw Phair in Providence, R I, on the very day of the murder Downing has visited Phair in his cell and positively identifies him The case will be argued again before the Judges of the Supreme Court

—The Commonwealth of Maine is making great strides in educational progress A young lady in a Portland grammar school, to whom was assigned the task of writing a composition which should contain the words diurnal, nocturnal, sanguinary, auxiliaries, lachrymose, perspiration, gustatory, somnolent, indefatigable, timidity, oleaginous and farinaceous, has accomplished her purpose in a thrilling tale entitled, "The Fair Captive of Castel Negro" This is one of the quietest and most subdued passages "And even as she mused the clatter of horses' hoofs was heard along the labyrinthian avenues of the outspreading park. It was Juanita's Alphonso de Cassa Blanca and his retainers Reining in his prancing steed beneath her casement window, he cried in oleaginous and farinaceous tones, 'Juanita, appear.'"

COLORADO'S GREAT MINING CAMP.

From The New York Tribune

Leadville.

LEADVILLE, Col, March 25—Colorado is now swept by a mining excitement almost unparalleled in its history The wonderful discoveries at this place which are just becoming thoroughly advertised, have set the whole State almost wild To the old timer it recalls the palmy days of 1859 when the first tide of immigration rolled in and the placer furore of 1863 64 when the Territory took such a stride toward its population that the attempt to be admitted as a State to which Andrew Johnson put his executive veto, was made I say, that the Leadville discoveries are just becoming thoroughly advertised They have been well known in Colorado and Wyoming for a year or more, and prospectors, miners and speculators have crowded in from every mining camp from the San Juan country to the Black Hills Within the past two or three months, however, people have been flocking in from 'the States' and the Pacific coast Whole colonies have come from Missouri and Iowa, and large amounts of capital have been sent in from Chicago. People are coming into the State at the rate of 300 a day, and most of them have Leadville as their objective point It is harvest time for the railroads, and Denver feels the stimulus in a renewed and inspiring business activity Leadville is the centre to which all attention is directed, however, and the theme of conversation everywhere The enormous fortunes so suddenly made here, the widespread nature of the deposits, the ease with which claims can be worked—all unite to make this a most inviting field for the prospector The example of a single man like Tabor, who, a year ago a poor man is now a millionaire and Lieutenant Governor of the State, or like Rische, the shoemaker, who has now more money than he knows how to spend, is productive, of course, of the wildest and most extravagant dreams among the adventurous class who swarm this whole Western country Nor is dazzling success confined to men of that stamp The hard headed Stevens, who discovered the carbonates, and who quietly acquired so many valuable claims and the present site of this 'city' before the news of it was noised abroad, was already a rich man when he looked so carefully through the abandoned placer gold diggings of California Gulch Leiter and Fatwell, the Chicago dry goods men, have also been very successful, the former being Stevens partner Senator Chaffee was known as one of the best practical mining experts in the State, and had made a great deal of money through his excellent judgment of mining property long before Leadville was heard of But the Aladdin like tales told of these men and many others have had the effect of raising to old fashioned excitement such as Colorado had almost despaired of ever seeing again

Leadville is an ice mold shed and a startling fact Lying beyond the range and seventy miles from the nearest railroad, which is pushing toward it day and night, it yet contains over 10 000 people—and they keep coming at a rate of from fifty to 100 a day The railroads are reaching out for the rich prize of its capture, to the The Denver, South Park and Pacific has the nearest station now—winding its passengers at Leadville after a day and a half of staging The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe is working up the Grand Canon of the Arkansas as fast as men can build the road The Colorado Central is considering the project of a high line from Georgetown, and the decision of the Union Pacific directors, who control it, is anxiously awaited Freight is now carried in by wagon from Webster, the present terminus of the Denver and South Park, and from points on the other roads, making a business which is perfectly enormous in its proportions The freighters are now charging 6 cents per pound from the end of the track, though they assert that even this rate does not pay in the present condition of the roads Thousands of horses and mules are used in the work, and huge amounts of money are invested in an occupation which will be gone with the coming of the railroad Every business is overstocked here The professions are crowded, and merchants of every grade and description are daily opening new stocks of goods Even miners do not find the amount of work expected as the lead carbonates are very easy to get out and fewer men are required than where the hard quartz lies in fissure veins Still, a gentleman here who is interested in numerous claims says that it is very hard to get the right kind of men to work them, and that any man willing to work can find employment

The chief characteristics of Leadville just now are mud and snow—the first of simply awful thickness, and the latter so deep in the gulches as to seriously impede prospecting Still the town goes on, and buildings are rising on every side Lots run all the way from $50 to $6,000 each, and real estate, to use a Western phrase, is "booming" All along the mountain side and in the valley are hundreds of log huts and slab cabins Wood is the prevailing building material, and is not a cheap one when green lumber sells for $90 a thousand and Chicago lumber for $150 The streets despite their pasty condition, are busy as Broadway Great enterprises are talked of on every side, and big figures are bandied about with a freedom astonishing to a person of conservative disposition There is no doubt that the mines about here are very rich and that new strikes are still being made, but it sometimes seems to an outsider that liberal discounts could be made from many of the stories told and the interests of truth not at all suffer thereby For the present, though, nearly everybody is making money—the miners because good things are being constantly discovered, and everybody else because the miners are Not the least successful among the businesses of the camp is that of smelting, and those who took time by the forelock and brought in their reduction works early have been coining money

The social aspects of the place are what might be expected in a mining camp. There are three daily newspapers, a school house, two churches—though there are five church organizations—and a branch of the Young Men's Christian Association On the other hand, there are large gambling houses, whose doors stand wide open, in which every kind of "skin" game is being played openly. There are two or three low variety theatres doing a driving trade. The income of one of them is said to be better than that of any mine, save a few of the most successful ones. There is a large element of the roughest of characters, and accordingly an occasional affray and shooting, but the majority of the inhabitants are too eager fortune hunters to indulge in such pastime The law loving people, aided by an efficient police force, keep the hoodlums and camp followers in check, and any one can walk the streets with perfect safety

The effect of the Leadville excitement has been to turn the attention of prospectors to other parts of the State for carbonates, and within the last twelve months a large town has sprung up at Silver Cliff The ore first found there was a chloride, but the flooring of carbonates has given the camp a great impetus, and led to the formation of the theory that an immense carbonate belt of untold richness stretches for 150 miles over all this part of the State

To sum up, then, the discoveries at Leadville and its immediate vicinity are of great value, and will more than double the annual mineral product of Colorado They have brought great quantities of capital into the State for investment, they have largely increased the population and opened up new districts for the settler, they have revived confidence in Colorado as a mineral producing State, and stimulated mining enterprises in every part of her territory, they have made fortunes for many men and will undoubtedly make them for many more, but they will not do everybody To the Eastener, then, who contemplates coming to Leadville, I would say, don't Stay at home unless you have something certain to come to Colorado opens an inviting field to the agriculturist and the skilled workman, and such will find ready work in almost any portion of the State She invites immigration, and can promise health and prosperity to all who come, but it is easy to overcrowd any given district, and it seems as if that were the danger which threatens Leadville It is certainly a wonderful camp however, and the depths of its possibilities may not yet have been sounded Still, caution on the part of those who have caught the fever, and a little patient investigation, will save a great deal of dissatisfaction and complaining in the future, and will be better for the permanent interests of the State

—Madame Patterson Bonaparte died at Baltimore on Friday last, after an illness of several weeks There were present at her death bed, her physician, Dr J S MacKenzie, her grandsons, Col Jerome Napoleon, and Charles Joseph Bonaparte, Mrs George Patterson, widow of her brother, the late George Patterson, and Mrs Clark, a relative, who has been her faithful attendant and nurse for the last ten years or more She leaves an estate valued at over one and a half millions of dollars It is well known that she married Jerome Bonaparte, the brother of Napoleon I, but not suiting his ambitious views, he compelled him to separate from her declaring, though the Pope refused a divorce, that he was not legally or religiously married When Napoleon made him King of Westphalia he was required to marry a daughter of the King of Wirtemburg

—A woman of fine personal appearance and handsomely dressed, jumped from a train on the Iron Mountain Railroad in Missouri the other night, while the cars were going at full speed She was on the way to meet her lover and be married, when she learned that her grandfather, who was sternly opposed to the match, was on board, and so she jumped off in the darkness, near the place where she was to meet her affianced Strangely enough she was not hurt by the leap, but walked to the town of Belmont, and was soon after married to the man of her choice, who came on the next train

Morrisville Notes.

Mr Charles Sine's new house is nearly completed

Pearson Horn, of this borough, is building a house for himself on the road leading to Tullington

Lewis Burns, who has kept the restaurant opposite the hotel for several years, has moved in one of Adam Patterson's houses

On Sunday morning week a gentleman who has been a missionary in India for several years, is to preach at the Presbyterian Church

Mr Charles Reed has commenced building a house in the upper part of the borough and when finished will add very much to that portion of the town

Henry Johnson has moved from the tavern now owned by James Hibbs, and formerly known as Gill's Hotel, to Tyburn Fritz Beatty takes his place

The Lyceum closed on last Saturday evening with a very full attendance The programme was varied and interesting. A duet was sung by Mr Charles Stites and Miss Addie Boileau, Mr Haven, from Trenton, represented different characters in six songs, Mr Cook, from the same place, favored the audience with some excellent instrumental music, so did Mr Mather. The subject of debate, "Wealth against Honor," was ably discussed in the negative by Miss Addie Boileau and Mr. R W Mull, Mr Wm G Howell and Mr Reep spoke in the affirmative The question was decided in favor of the negative Several requests were read by the President and responses were made by Miss Carrie Lanning, who declaimed 'The Monkeys' Indignation Meeting," and "Mad Mag" was given by Miss Addie Boileau, Miss Mamie Taylor read "Damon and Pythias," and Mrs Anne Washburn read a humorous selection about "The Judge shoveling snow off the roof" The two last had been appointed by the executive committee the preceding week A dialogue by Misses Maggie Bell, Mamie Lewis, Katie Morris, Sallie Minster and George Parsons, was humorous and interesting it was entitled "The Tea Party," Maggie Bell took the character of "Mrs Partington,' and George Parsons of "Ike"

—A cow belonging to Eastburn Reeder, of Solebury, went mad one day last week, having been bitten without his knowledge by the rabid dog which went through that neighborhood about three weeks ago He was aware that one cow was bitten, and he has been doctoring her with elecampane, and as yet she has shown no symptoms of hydrophobia.

☞ PHORTH, $1,200—"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all of this expense was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife. She has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit."

SORTS.

—Bath street has a new dining store

—This appears to be the era of building

—John Brown has sold his interest to Wesley R Johns

—An interesting meeting of Council may be expected next Monday evening

—It is said that Uncle Lew Patterson will have opposition in the ice business this summer

—The Water Company have extended their water main on Pond street as far as Lafayette

—Jacob Hall has succeeded P O Hutchins in the store keeping business at the corner of Wood and Walnut streets

—Samuel Swain sold two houses and lots on the corner of Pine and Headly streets to Lilen Cutler, for $1660

—The report that walking matches are to be introduced as gymnastic exercises, in to the schools is without foundation

—May not the Nuisance Committee of Council, Messrs Hogue, Harkins and Holt be called the H H H Committee?

—Rev Father Lynch, who has been sick for a long time, is in a critical condition and his death may be looked for at any minute.

—The property of Joseph D Thorpe, deceased, was sold last Thursday at administrator's sale to Charles C Douglass for $1 50.

—Joseph Parker has been chosen Superintendent of the Presbyterian Sunday School, in place of Mr Crichton who went to Colorado

—The price of milk in Bristol is now six cents per quart The price of water may be ascertained upon application to the Water Company

—Legal measures are being taken by John K and Robert H Ivins to secure a legacy which has been bequathed them by a relative who recently died in Ohio

—The Episcopal and Catholic churches are making their usual preparations for Easter services, and both church buildings will be beautifully decorated with flowers

—Tuesday evening has become so identified with the Institute and the Temperance Lyceum that the discontinuance of their meetings seems almost the abolition of the evening

—Pinafore was performed at Burlington last Saturday night, and the ferry boat was crowded with Bristolians who went over to see Little Buttercup, and the other opera characters

—At the late sale of the well known Bickling farm, in Bristol township it was purchased by a son of General Beaumfort, of Harrisburg who has already moved on the property

—We understand that Mrs Dr Rousseau has rented her property, corner of Cedar and Mulberry streets, to Thomas Hughes, and intends making Philadelphia her residence

—At the Methodist church the new hymnal, authorized to be used by the General Conference has been introduced, replacing the old hymn book, which has been in use for many years

—Last Friday the schooner Clara Merrick, which was partly owned in Bristol, was wrecked off the Hatteras Shoals and is a total loss The crew were all saved, being taken off by another vessel.

—A rumor is current that parties from Philadelphia are considering the matter of purchasing the Keystone forge for the purpose of engaging in iron manufacturing We fear it is only a rumor

—The schools will be closed to-morrow (Good Friday) Why this day was selected by our legislators as a legal holiday is not to be explained by the theory that Church and State are separate in Pennsylvania

—History often repeats itself Last week persons who had business on the streets at night, in a number of instances relied on lanterns to light their pathway as the street lamps were not lighted, and the moon was obscured by clouds

—The time is approaching for the opening of the base ball season but we hear nothing about the organization of any clubs in Bristol It is presumed that our boys have already achieved glory enough in this line to last them for several years

—Mr H U. Howes has moved from Bristol township to the house on Cedar street vacated by James Paxson, and the latter is no longer a citizen of Bristol but has settled in the township to see that Hon Jesse W Knight gets fair play in politics in his bailiwick

—On Tuesday the funeral of Mrs Antoinette Bache, wife of William Bache, occurred Her death was very sudden and is a sad affliction to the family and her many friends The services were held in the Episcopal Church The public schools were closed for several hours to allow the teachers to attend the funeral, which they did in a body.

—The news from Colorado is not apt to enthuse persons who have been anticipating emigrating to that State Edmund Banes writes from Denver that there is no work there nor in the surrounding towns and that from 300 to 400 emigrants are arriving there every day except Sunday, and that thousands of persons there are unable to obtain work, many men bringing with them their wives and little ones

—List of letters remaining in the Bristol Post Office, Wednesday April 9, 1879 — James Blair, 2, Wesley Canwell, Peter Curran, Priscilla A Draper, Wm Goslin, Mrs Mary E Hellings, Mrs John P Hellings, Mrs Eva Johnson, Mrs Bridget Kelly, Hannah Lawson, 2, Bridget Meehan, Martha Messmer, Catherine Wagner Alice W Taylor, E. M Whitney, Mrs Anna E Woodington, and L R Vandegrift

—Army Post No 75 has forwarded to the proper authorities the names of over sixty soldiers buried in the churchyards of Bristol and Tullytown, whose graves are without tombstones. The War Department will provide suitable head-stones for all whose identity is without question, and it is expected they will be in place by Decoration Day. On that interesting occasion the Post will decorate the graves of one hundred and sixty-five soldiers

Council Proceedings

The new Burgess and Council held a special meeting last Monday morning

The oath of office was administered to Councilman Henry Sutch by the Burgess, immediately preceding the opening of Council

At 10 o'clock Council was called to order, and after roll call, the nomination and election of officers of Council began Symington Phillips was chosen President and J Wesley Wright, Clerk by unanimous vote Council Lorain Hance were two candidates Charles W Peirce Jr, and Louis A Hoguet The first ballot resulted in the election of Mr Peirce who was declared by vote of City Solicitor Wilkinson was re-elected Corporation Counsel William Loudenbough Pound keeper, and Byrnan Hunter the Superintendent of the town clock The salary of the clerk was fixed at $75 a reduction of $25 from last year The treasurer's bond and salary remains at $200 The price for taking care of the clock per annum remains unchanged at $20 and the Constable's salary was scaled from $400 to $300 per annum

Mr Scheide offered a resolution that $600 be appropriated for the services of night police and that the positions be tendered to the constables of the First and Second wards

Mr Hoguet offered as an amendment that the sum of $750 be appropriated instead of $600 The amendment was put and lost and the original motion was put by a vote of 6 to 5

The Burgess announced the standing committees, as follows

Finance—Charles L Scheide, chairman, R W Holt, J W Wright, and C W Peirce, Jr

Streets—William H Booz chairman, R W Holt and Thomas L Harkins

Law—J Wesley Wright chairman L A Hoguet and Charles E Scheide

Wharves—H M Wright, chairman, Charles H Fenton, and Symington Phillips

Poor—Charles W Peirce chairman Henry Sutch and William H Booz

Nuisance—L A Hoguet chairman, J W Holt, and T B Harkins

The second Monday of each month was agreed upon as the time for holding the regular meetings of Council

The rules governing the last Council were, on motion, continued

The constable was directed to rent the Wood and Cedar street wharves at public vendue provided the price be not less than $10 for each and those on the Delaware river front, not leased, at a sum not less than $5

The petition of H Burke for the position of lamplighter of the street oil lamps was referred to the Street Committee

The Street Committee were also directed to examine into the condition of the floor in the Mill street foot bridge

The matter of the borough printing was postponed until the next meeting of council

On motion, council then adjourned

The Choral Society

EDITOR GAZETTE In reply to "Inquirer" in your last issue I will say that the limitation of membership is not only ability to sing but to read music without further instruction This proviso necessarily limits the number of active members but it will readily be seen that as we are in no sense a singing school and use it only for the rehearsal of concerted music, we could not accept any others without being unable to make any progress as the advanced singers would have to wait upon the beginners, and would soon tire and withdraw

The Executive Committee have not thought of asking the aid of those unable to sing, for the reason that we did not think the rehearsals would prove of sufficient interest to those not actively participating and also no provision has been made for public rehearsals Friends of the members, however have the privilege of attending rehearsals, there being no thought of exclusion, any one who might feel interested We are gratified to know our little society is challenging public interest and inquiry and we hope to merit proper attention after we are a little older This season is regarded by us as a preliminary one and if successful enough to warrant continuance we will go on again in the fall In the meantime we hope to have all join us who can

ONE OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

EDITOR GAZETTE I read with regret, in your last paper that gymnastics are to be introduced into our public schools I think that the five and a half hours which the teachers spend in school can be more profitably employed than in teaching a few gymnastic movements which can never be of any use to the pupils There are very few movements which can be taught properly without music to accompany them, and why not occupy the time thus employed in teaching industrial drawing and this make it especially in the schools? In all manufacturing towns like Bristol, the majority of pupils leave school at the age of twelve or fourteen, and the education which they acquire up to that time should be of a practical character J

—Easter is at hand, the season of flowers, and as beautiful a floral display as can be be seen any where else in the county, may be found at the green house of Peyton De Witt, on Pond Street It is well worth a visit to see the collection

—The Young Apollo Club, of New York, is composed of a church choir of boys who have gained a well earned reputation as singers Everybody who has heard a good choir of boys sing know what charming purity there is in their voices Next Wednesday evening at Birch's Opera House, Burlington, an opportunity will be presented to hear the "Young Apollos" in Pinafore All the parts will be taken by boys, even Josephine and the other female characters Pinafore has been performed by many combinations, but this is something entirely new, and the newspapers where the singers have performed speak of them in high terms The ferry boat, as usual, will make a free trip to accommodate those wishing to go over from Bristol, leaving here at half past seven o clock

☞ It is a mystery why some farmers will take doubtful chances in the color of their butter by using carrots, or the crude pasty and strong-smelling annatto, when the Perfected Butter Color of Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt, gives the very best results in color at a trifling cost

The Tea-party.

Written for a Bristol boy by a young cousin in Portsmouth New Hampshire

The frog had asked a party to tea
And a right good time he meant it should be

His compliments sent on a float to me
Desired my presence the party to see

At half past six the message did say
So gaily attired at close of the day

I wended my way to the pretty retreat
All bowing and smiling to all took a seat

The table was spread on the soft green grass
But the fine white cloth was missing Alas

The acorns had furnished a nice lot of cups—
But not from sweet Kitty the butterfly sups

Oh no! She must sip from far daintier make
So the rednut goblets were the order her sake

The dishes were many of leaves small and round,
The nicest and greenest, that ever were found

And now for the supper a feast of delight
Such dainties not long I get to eat every night

The dishes were heaped with the choicest of sweets
From honey cake, down to the nicest of meats

The butter up yellow a dainty store seen
Looking really delicious as it grease it was meant

And clover puffs pink and clover puffs white—
With violet nectar so sparkling and bright

The goblets were filled to the brim with the dew—
I found I bade them to drink up, their glass I do you

Mr Cricket was there in a new suit of green
And I showed by his manner I'd wished to be seen

Mr Grasshopper came with a skip and a jump
And finally settled himself on a stump

Mr Mole walked over from behind the wall
And the dig his head like a needle does doll

Then little Miss Midge appeared on the scene—
While Katydid run on before as a screen

The Firefly lustened long in his pride
And Butterfly waited, rest He by his side

So many were present (and each looked his best)
That I really can't tell you—and so leave the rest

The answer to the enigma of last week, commencing "I often murmur"—was correctly guessed to be "River" by George Horn, Jr It was also guessed by some one signing "L S" on a postal card Was this boy or girl ashamed of his or full name, or afraid of guessing wrong, that then initials had to represent them?

Don't be afraid of this column, girls and boys It is written for your sole amusement, and your full names given to the editor, are kept secret, unless you desire otherwise

DEAR MR EDITOR Are you a lady or a man? My brother Frank says you are a man and he knows you But if you are, I mean to write this letter to you and tell you something Why don't you ever write for the girls? It is always boys, boys Boys ain't so very important as all that I am eleven years old I had my birthday last month On that day papa wanted me to do something useful He wants me to be a good housekeeper he says On that day I made him some maccaroons Mother showed me how and I did the making every bit Mamma said it would be nice to tell other girls how I did it You take one teacup of shellbark meats mash fine, 1 teacup of pulverized sugar, the white of 1 egg beaten very stiff, 1 teaspoonful almond water Make in small balls and set very close together in a warm oven As you make up each one, dip your hand in water This makes them shine I copied this from mamma's She says it is late for the shellbarks now, so perhaps you can not make them but next winter you can Mine were splendid I have our dog, ate up a whole dishful Please don't tell my name

Yours truly M J

Answer to the French conundrum The French word "roc" means rock, if spelled backward it makes "cor" a hunter's horn

Why do white sheep furnish more wool than black ones?

How can you take one from nineteen and have twenty remain?

Professor Krowlton, of San Francisco spells potato "Ghoughphtheightteean," according to the following rule —

"Gh stands for P, as you will find from the last letters in hiccough' Ough stands for O, as in 'dough' Phth stands for T, as in 'phthisis' Eigh stands for A, as in 'neighbor' Tte stands for T, as in 'gazette,' and Eau stands for O as in 'beau'"

☞ To washing in cold water use Nicholl's Oleine Soap warranted strictly pure Hard or well water may be used in washing with this soap, as well as soft water It is the best soap ever offered to the public Every bar full weight—16 ounces

☞ The cheapest frames in the world can be seen at the Ark on Mill street

An Important

Subject for all is how to reduce expenses to meet the exigencies of the times It must be admitted that there is not one out of a hundred, who has not felt the pressure of the present dull state of the country, and in this town and vicinity, all have suffered more or less in the depreciation of stocks, real estate, and large depreciations of wages. But there is a remedy for all this, we must be more careful in our purchases, and when we purchase make cash the basis of all transactions If we can buy calico for 6 cts per yard dried apples at 3 cts quart currants 3 cts, and good coffee at 18 cts, it shows that a householder can live on a comparatively small sum per week, and the best plan is to follow the example of the majority, and deal at a store where no credit is given and where cash buyers are not compelled to assist in paying the debts of trust customers Read the list of new goods Bargains from the Sheriff's hands Lot of embroidered night gowns, 50 cts Ladies basques, 35 cts, Stockings 4 5, and 6 cts, gloves, 3 4 and 5 cts, veiling beige, 25 cts, Ribbons, 2 and 3 cts per yard, Corsets' 25 cts Pins, 2 cts yard Best silk 6 cts5 Ladies Hats, 10 cts, Feathers, real tips, 5 cts, Muslin, 4 cts, Mens Pants, 65 cts, Undershirts, 25 cts, Hats, 37 cts Large lot of Boys' Hats, 35 cts, Shoes, $1 00 $1 25, etc, Ladies' and Children's Shoes cheap, Lard, 8 cts Perches, 5 cts, Mackeral, 5 cts Everything from a needle to a pulpit, cheaper than manufacturers prices, at the cheapest store in Bucks Co, Woods, cor Mill and Wood Streets, Bristol Store keepers and peddlers supplied

Miscellaneous.

Notice!

In the face of everything, Wanamaker & Brown increased their great Clothing business last year at Oak Hall nearly a quarter of a million dollars, and for 1879 the new plans will make the house more popular and increase the business much more Eighteen years in the people's service at the old corner of Sixth and Market has taught us how to do the business well

Notice!

Whatever may be said to the contrary in the United States sells anything like so much Clothing, as does Oak Hall, and no house in Philadelphia sells more than a quarter as many goods as Mr Wanamaker sells in Clothing alone. Doing this large business shows the people's regard for our goods and enables us to buy cheaply and sell at small profit

Notice!

New patterns have been made this year and new styles introduced through Mr Robert C Ogden (formerly partner of the famous firm of Devlin & Co New York) who is now associated with Oak Hall and will give his whole energies and valuable experience to improving the manufacture of our Boys and Mens Clothing We do not buy Clothing like the dealers but make it expressly for our own sales The Spring stock is splendid, and no other make of goods so fine have such assortment or are sold as cheaply

Notice!

Impressions have been erroneously given to the effect that Mr John Wanamaker who founded Oak Hall is not interested in the old store, and that it does not have his attention on the contrary his ownership of it remains unchanged and he has lost none of his love for it Every day finds him upon it in all its departments Mr William H Wanamaker spends his entire time on the Oak Hall business

A VISIT THIS SPRING PARTICULARLY INVITED.

JOY WILL FIND YOU WHERE YOU ARE

BY ELLA M. BAKER

Yearning hearts, ye long, ye crave
Having, maybe, all things save
Some one soul's desire that could
Only make possessions good
Verily ye do no wrong,
For immortals here must long
To wish, yea to anticipate,
Is their birth mark in this state
Yet though thirst and famine s[illegible]
Ensue thee, heed this lore
Bide thee patient in thy place,
Do its work and take its grace
For come joy from near or far
It will find you where you are

Restless hearts ye wander wide
Questioning on every side,
Roaming wearily with mind
Bent to find what none can find
Joy's blind house the secret throne
Where she lives alone unknown
Thou wouldst the certain wrestler [illegible]
Clumsy pilferer! foolish guest!—
Be more childlike, wait thy turn
With humility thus learn
Bide thee patient in thy place
Do its work and take its grace
For, come joy from near or far
Joy will find you where you are

Humble hearts to whom delay
Hath taught silence day by day
Deemed not overlooked forgot
Your renownless modest lot
David walked the sheep about
There the anointing sought him out
Gideon threshed, there no less
Angels found him by the press
Bide thee patient in thy place
Do its work and take its grace
For come joy from near or far,
Joy will find you where you are

HINTS FOR SPRING GARDENING.—The street commissioners earnestly desire that old boots, hats, crockery, tin cans, ashes dead cats and potato parings should be sown broadcast in many streets which are now in splendid order for planting

Plant stoves in the garret, cellar or shed. They require dry soil. An application of grease will prevent rust

Clothes pegs should be planted Monday mornings on lines about eight feet from the ground

The T weed, formerly abundant about the City Hall is now very scarce

Cats, rakishly inclined about the flower-garden beds, should be shooed off

This is the time for raising spring plasters It is not always such an easy matter

The best variety of egg plant is a hen

The best oyster plants are found at Saddle Rock

Now sew buttons promptly on the pantaloons and shirts

The kerosene is a bright pretty flower and it's little trouble to raise it and many things with it

Early cabbages should be planted in pots full of boiling water about four o'clock in the morning

The cheapest way to raise green peas in the city is to buy them by the can

Plant mouse traps in the pantry. Apply a top dressing of cheese

Tramps are easiest uprooted by liberal application of club, shotgun or watch dog

Bricks should be sown in beds of mortar

Plough deep while sluggards sleep

Much attention this spring is being devoted to raising the wind especially in Wall street. Its cultivation requires great skill and care

A pretty horticultural nocturnal display may be made as follows. Take a pumpkin, scoop the inside out and make pies of it Then take the empty shell cut the semblance of human eyes, nose and mouth in it and put a lighted candle inside. Set out each night in the garden —New York Graphic

EMERSON AND JUDAISM —Professor Adler says — Judaism has for ages been to the world an enigma, those outside its pale have been unable to comprehend its spirit, but it is sometimes possible to find an individual who, in his own personality, represent the spirit of a people, and Ralph Waldo Emerson can give those unacquainted with Judaism an insight into the character of the Jewish people He is the greatest philosopher which America has produced, the man whose eagle soul soars to the sublimest heights of thought has given to the present and rising generations their deepest and holiest aspirations He has been a mighty but silent influence for reform in this country, he has awakened in the hearts of many men dissatisfaction with existing evils, has given them that most invaluable of all beliefs—belief in the possibility of good Emerson is preeminently a reformer, yet feels repelled by all measures of special reform, he says, 'When I see a special reformer, I seem to see one crippled, one stunted, the man who assails the kingdom of darkness and clings to one incidental evil, becomes a partial man I am tempted to ask him, What right sir, have you to that one virtue which you exaggerate?' Rather than to be condemned as an aristocrat and a conservative, he holds back from all special reforms and contents himself with one rule of life—to develop his own character, to fulfil the law and the excellence of the universe, in his person confident that the whole universe will come round of its own accord to such as he is Now, this is the spirit of Judaism "

ANIMALS SENSITIVE TO RIDICULE.— Mr Sidney Buxton, in one of his amusing papers on animals in the Animal World for February, says that dogs and horses are, as far as he knows, the only animals sensitive to ridicule while cats and birds are wholly unaware that they are being laughed at He tells of a pony of his own that gets very cross when disparaging remarks are made upon him, and becomes furious, and stamps about his stall, putting back his ears, and attempting to bite, if he is openly laughed at, while praise greatly pleases him The truth is, that it is only those creatures which can feel sympathy with man which can also appreciate ridicule The horse sympathizes evidently with many of the rider's feelings and amusements while the dog can enter into no small proportion of his feelings But birds and cats, though often extremely affectionate, and full of attachment to individuals, hardly ever attempt to enter into human feelings, as Cowper's dog "Beau," for instance, entered into the poet's desire to possess himself of the water lily The hatred of ridicule always accompanies a capacity for sympathy. Certainly dogs and probably horses, know the difference between being laughed at in derision, as we laugh at a fool, and being laughed at in admiration, as we laugh at a good comic actor, and enjoy the latter as much as they resent the former. It is questionable whether some parrots do not understand and enjoy the practice of making fun of their human acquaintances—do not appreciate the art of duping, and take pleasure in it —Spectator.

PLOUGH MONDAY.—All over England, in years gone by, this time honored festival was joyously observed by the peasantry On this day, which is always the first Monday after the twelfth day, agricultural laborers and husbandmen were accustomed to draw about a plough and solicit money, with mummeries and dancing, preparatory to the recommencement of their tasks after the Christmas holidays. In a few places they still draw the plough, but the sport is mostly now confined to mumming and alms gathering. Formerly the "fool plough," as it was called, was absolutely essential to the exhibition, and was dragged in procession to the doors of townsfolk and villagers Long ropes were attached to it, and from thirty to forty stalwart young fellows, in clean white shirts or smocks, but protected from the weather by warm waistcoats underneath, drew it along. Their smocks were gayly decorated all over with bright-colored ribbons, tied in knots and bows, and their hats were adorned in the same way The pageant usually included an old woman or a boy dressed up to represent one, who was gayly bedizzened and called "Bessy" There was also a country bumpkin dressed up to play the "fool." He was covered with ribbons and clad in skins, with a depending tail, and carried a small box or can, which he rattled about among the spectators to collect donations in. These masqueraders were attended by music and morris dancers. And there was also a frolicksome romp by a few girls in gaudy finery The money collected was afterward spent in feasting and conviviality In olden times very little work was ever done during the twelve days devoted to Christmas, and farmers were then wont to feast and reward their husbandmen for past industry Plough Monday seemed to remind them of their business, and on the morning of the day both men and maidens strove who could show their readiness to commence the labors of the newly awakened year at the earliest

There are 50,000,000 acres of land in California fit for cultivation, but not over 5,000,000 are in actual use for these purposes, and not over 8,000,000 are enclosed Over 20,000,000 acres are held by land rings or in land monopolies by speculators for [illegible] purposes. In tracts of 125,000 to 300,000 acres This state of things has long been felt to be a great check to the prosperity of the State Under normal conditions immigration might be expected to flock in large numbers to settle upon the rich farming land, and hearty active and enterprising agricultural communities would arise, but this has been rendered impossible by the refusal of the large land owners to sell except at exorbitant prices The new Constitution that is now before the California people for adoption seeks to remedy this evil by providing that the taxation of lands held in large uncultivated tracts shall not be assessed, as heretofore, at nominal value of fifty cents to $2.50 per acre, but that the same valuation shall be placed upon them as upon the small cultivated farm adjoining them This will be from $20 to $60 per acre, according to location and will make the annual tax on one of these small kingdoms $100,000 or more. It is believed that such assessments will soon cause the monopolists to sell their tracts for what they will fairly bring

Here is a curiously elaborate receipt for the cure of love, from a scarce old book "The Adventures of Brusanus, Prince of Hungaria Pleasant for all to Reade and Profitable for some to Follow," by Barnaby Rich, 1592, "Take two ounces of the sound of a bell when it is rung for a man's soul that died for love, as much of the neighing of a horse that hath brought his master from Dunmow with the flitch of Bacon then take the paring of any man's nails that is full four and twenty years old and never flattered woman, grind all these to a fine powder in a windmill in the bottom of a fishpond, then take half a pint of the water that is wiped from [illegible] of his wife [illegible] ... [illegible] love."

Japanese chivalry does not require an exaggerated deference on the part of man toward woman. A Samurai treats a lady with a courtesy very similar to that which he displays toward his brother Samurai. [illegible] British sailor [illegible] woman save in the way of kindness, is a villain," has complete acceptance among the Japanese. When [illegible] two annoys Okam [illegible] by two strangers [illegible] him is a scoundrel and a villain for ill-treating a woman [illegible] is seized and her hair is cut off by two masked assailants, their real intent [illegible] thus acting is found. But they are spoken of as brutal ruffians because they attack a woman. It must be admitted that Japanese husbands possess very arbitrary powers, being able at any time to give their wives a writing of divorcement and to put them away without assigning any reason, after which both parties are at liberty to marry again, but legal polygamy is unknown Among the causes which justify divorce are enumerated—disobedience to parents in law jealousy and too much talking but these objections apply only to the wife and a husband cannot be so easily disposed of

Khalil Bey gambled away $2,000,000 in Paris in three years, and his last [illegible] to $360,000 A friend in trying to stop him, was met with the rebuke "Remember this my friend I prefer losing by doing what I please to winning by doing as you wish" Purchasing [illegible] was one of his peculiarities During his stay [illegible] he bought forty seven of them for his lady friends Kalergis Greek Minister [illegible] hated Khalil Bey When the former went to [illegible] he taunted the Turk invariably in these words, "The days are gone by when you could split my ears" at the same time showing his ear which had been split when he was a prisoner in Turkey Khalil Bey died lately in Constantinople

In connection with the recent marriage below her station in life of Ex-Governor Hubbard's daughter at Hartford, Conn it is recalled that Ex-Governor Hubbard when a boy was apprenticed to a farmer and then had charge of his horses. He has since won his way to an enviable place in his profession and among New England statesmen He then refers to the humble circumstances of his boyhood with just that pride that he has achieved success in the face of so many obstacles Governor Hubbard's oldest son was married some years ago to the daughter of a German [illegible] and the marriage has been an unusually happy one

THE NEW WEED Sewing Machine!

THE Most Complete Machine in the Market.

WHILE the New Weed retains all the qualities of the old model, it has gained the following new ones: Lightness of Running and Noiselessness of Movement.
THE CAM has been replaced by a crank giving an accurate movement to the needle bar without noise
THE VIBRATING ARM is substituted [illegible] shaft
THE TAKE UP is entirely left out the needle [illegible] serving for that purpose
The Stitch Regulating Nut is on the bed of the Machine The upper thread slips into all its guides by going only two places to thread
The Shuttle is the most complete one ever made for easy threading only one place to thread [illegible] a few of the improvements of the New Weed In buying a Weed you know you are getting a new machine as they can not use the old ones to make new ones of There are a great many machines being sold for new, that are only old ones rebuilt
We know there are a great many people yet wanting Sewing Machines, and there are a great many old machines that ought to be exchanged for new ones, and to those wanting machines we would say cast aside your prejudice in favor of this or that machine and come and see the light running easy threading no trouble [illegible] handsome Weed Sell cheap on easy terms Old machines taken in exchange for new ones Old machines for sale cheap
